COMPUTER SCIENCE AND IT AT ALSAGER SCHOOL

Computer Science and Information Technology form part of the Communication Faculty which includes MFL, Business, Computer Science, IT and Economics. We have a staffing complement of 11 in the faculty including two full-time Computer Science teachers. Pupils at Alsager experience creative and engaging lessons that stretch and challenge all abilities.

All pupils study Computer Science and Information Technology at KS3. At KS4 many choose to continue with Computer Science or an IT based subject and the uptake at KS5 is also good where we teach A level Computer Science from the OCR specification and Level 3 Edexcel BTEC IT.

At Key stage 4 pupils study their options subjects for four to five periods a fortnight. We currently use the Edexcel specification and our preferred programming language is Python. HTML and CSS for web design and database SQL are also taught as part of the course. Knowledge of JavaScript would be an advantage.

We recognise the importance of inspiring pupils to study Computer Science and IT and organise regular competitions and trips which are always extremely popular with our pupils.

The Communication Faculty has superb facilities including two new airconditioned Computer Science suites. Students also have access to resources such as Raspberry Pis, BBC Microbits, tablets, Lego Mindstorms kits and programmable drones.

The successful candidate will be well qualified and able to teach Computer Science to A Level. It is vital that staff are flexible, hardworking and keen to maintain their expertise in their target subject. A willingness to participate in school trips would also be desirable.

Alsager School expects high standards of both pupils and staff and provides a friendly environment working in teams. We are dedicated to supporting all our staff and we have an extensive training programme in place. Alsager School is an alliance of the Holmes Chapel Teaching School and we work very closely with local secondary schools developing and sharing practices.
